STILL PLAYING WITH TOYS ADDS COLORIST ROBERT SMITH TO ITS CREATIVE LINE-UP

North Hollywood, CA, February 28, 2007 – In the thick of production on the first arc of a four-book series “Still Playing with Toys Presents,” company co-founder and editor-in-chief Troy Benjamin announced this morning the addition of colorist Robert Smith to the creative team for a four issue run.

Smith, comes to the table with a strong background in graphic design having received his degree from Gallaudet University, the acclaimed liberal arts university for the deaf and hard of hearing. He also continues to be a partner at independent comic book company Supreme Knight Studios as a creative consultant to the CEO.

Says Editor Troy Benjamin, “Not only does Rob have a keen and well-trained eye for the art that he produces, but it’s great to have another long time friend on board.”

“Still Playing with Toys Presents,” a four-issue showcase of Still Playing with Toys properties, is set for a July 2007 release date. Laudable penciler Chris Enterline performs double duty doing both art and inks for the four issues.

“We have everything in place now to provide a fantastic book that I know won’t disappoint,” adds Editor Benjamin of the recent announcement. “The real hard work is still ahead of us but with Chris [Enterline] and Rob [Smith], we’ve got a great team that will rise and exceed the challenge.”

Still Playing with Toys, a new company formed by Troy Benjamin and Drew Drescher, is the exemplification of an independent publishing company. Their goal, to create original material and to provide up and coming creators with an outlet for their imaginations. With strong backgrounds in entertainment and business, Benjamin and Drescher aim for their debut titles to be launched in the summer of 2007. The company is based out of North Hollywood, CA.
